

Jeffrey Peisach
Principal

Jeff supports a variety of consulting engagements at Cambria, with special emphasis on developing solutions in the firm's Interactive practice. Jeff focuses on leveraging best practice human resource management expertise to create intuitive online applications. His work has included complex online management simulations, automated interview selection guides, online development planning systems and resource guides, web publishing, and new employee orientation programs. Much of his work also includes integration of video, desktop tools, instructional content and realistic "day in the life" simulations of work experiences that bring learning to the desktop in just-in-time fashion. Jeff's client engagements include work in investment banking, professional services, technology, software, aerospace and defense, medical research, pharmaceuticals, and insurance.

Jeff holds a BS in business administration from Georgetown University with a concentration in human resources management.